II. Word-formation

Mood Food

With our _____ (10) hectic pace of life, it is becoming more and more difficult to eat _____ (11). Hurried snacks and fast food seem to have become the norm. This may be having a _____ (12) effect on people's waistlines, but did you know it can also cause wild mood swings and _____ (13)? Food is an important part of the body-mind relationship and as researchers point out, it is particularly our _____ (14) of sugary, fatty, carbohydrate-loaded foods that _____ (15) affect the way we feel. These foods trigger the body's production of so-called neurotransmitters, chemicals _____ (16) messages from one nerve cell to the other, which provides a seemingly _____ (17) _____ (18) of mood. Thus, a crunchy bar of chocolate may make you feel better, but _____ (19) this feeling is usually short-lived. The reason is simple. Though our blood sugar level initially peaks, it _____ (20) slumps again, and we are soon left feeling _____ (21) than before.
